Welcome Message from the Conference Chairs

We want to foster an intellectual curiosity that draws on the wisdom of the past while also encouraging new ideas. It is our sincere hope that during our conference, new and purposeful relationships will be formed that will benefit everyone involved.

This conference organised by Centre for Business & Economic Research (CBER) and Future University in Egypt, seeks to elucidate a wealth of issues in all aspects of business management, Finance, banking & Accounting, Information technology, Marketing, HRM, Hospitality & Tourism Management, Growth & Economic Development, Globalisation & International Trade and many more subjects. Contributions should therefore be of interest to scholars, practitioners and researchers in management in both developed and developing countries targeting a worldwide readership.

We are particularly interested in research that captures and articulates the ways in which management thinking will need to change or be customised in order to be effective and efficient in this new environment.

We believe that the 2023 CBER-FUE International Conference on "Restructuring of the Global Economy" shall provide you with opportunities to disseminate your research, learn from other researchers and network with other like-minded scholars.

We look forward to meeting you in Oxford at the University of Oxford, UK, 2023!

International Conference on the Restructuring of the Global Economy (ROGE) - "Towards Sustainability"

Invitation

You are cordially invited to attend the '2023 CBER-FUE International Academic Conference', Monday, August 7th and Tuesday, August 8th, 2023, will be hosted jointly by the Centre for Business & Economic Research (CBER), UK in collaboration with the Faculty of Commerce and Business Administration-Future University in Egypt.

Conference Theme:

Restructuring of the Global Economy with special focus on SDGs

Since the publication of Goldman Sachs' BRIC (Brazil, Russia, India, and China) report in 2001, the debate over the role of so-called developing emerging countries versus so-called developed countries in shaping global business has gained traction. A revised version of the same report, BRICs and Beyond, by the same authors, with upward revisions to certain growth projections, has added fuel to the debate, so much so that most countries have now accepted that the global economy is in transition.

A second wave of nations, known as the MINTs (Mexico, Indonesia, Nigeria, and Turkey), has also been identified as ones to watch, as the fallout from the 2008 global financial crisis has caused many of the established economic orthodoxies to be questioned and challenged. Furthermore, geopolitical considerations, combined with concerns about energy, water, and fuel security, have raised serious concerns about policy, future strategy, and the benefits and drawbacks of globalisation.

It is understandable that such a changing economic dynamic necessitates new approaches to the formulation of policies examining macroeconomic stability, as well as the development of strategies by firms of all sizes. Multinational corporations and small and medium-sized enterprises (SMEs) will all be involved in developing strategies to survive, compete, and grow. Both governments and businesses are under intense pressure to perform and deliver. Alternative, possibly radical, policies and strategies will need to be devised and presented to decision-making bodies in such a scenario. New technology, changing demographics, and the need to meet the demands of diverse stakeholders all ensure that these are indeed challenging times for policymakers and practitioners alike.

We must all be open to new ideas. Unfortunately, many of us have allowed ourselves to become ideologically/intellectually cocooned, to the point where some of us have yet to comprehend how events such as the Brexit result and similar momentous events came about. This conference provides an excellent opportunity for us to broaden our horizons.

Oxford - 'the City of Dreaming Spires'

Few places are more readily associated with scholarly endeavour than Oxford. This city on the River Thames in Southern England is the location of Oxford University, the oldest university in the English-speaking world. Whilst some might argue that the city is not as aesthetically pleasing as its arch-rival Cambridge it remains a visual delight and a veritable treasure house of human achievements. Oxford not only boasts the world-famous university, but is also home to Oxford Brookes University, an institution that consistently scores highly when it comes to student satisfaction surveys.

Being within easy reach of London has ensured that far from being a sleepy academic oasis Oxford has been touched by national events such as the English Civil War in the Seventeenth Century and has itself helped mould those who have gone on to enhance the body of human knowledge. To date it is worth noting that Oxford University has been the place of study for 26 British Prime Ministers. The city has long been a centre of publishing, with the Oxford University Press being the largest university press in the world. No visit to Oxford would be complete without a visit to Blackwell's Bookseller and of course the Ashmolean and Pitt rivers Museums. Oxford has long been a centre of manufacturing and innovation and is proud to be the place where the famous Mini car is assembled. Oxford is ethnically diverse and extraordinarily outward looking, being twinned with Bonn (Germany), Grenoble (France), Leiden (The Netherlands), León (Nicaragua) and Perm (Russia). Whilst Oxford is in many respects a thriving and affluent city it is important to note that it has pockets of deprivation and faces challenges over land usage and new development that have given rise to environmental campaigns such as that to Save Port Meadow. That said, it still has the ability to beguile and is proud to be place rich with positive associations and as such one of the strongest brand names in the world.

The shopaholics amongst you may well will to visit the famed Bicester Village, Oxfordshire (www.bicestervillage.com) – this is easily reached from Oxford

See: www.tourinaday.com/oxford/bicester-village-to-oxford.html

Finally we heartily recommend that if time (and budget) permits that you venture forth from Oxford to visit the Oxfordshire town of Woodstock where you will discover the magnificent Blenheim Palace (www.blenheimpalace.com), the birth place of Sir Winston Churchill (1874-1965).

FAQs

- Presentation timing: A full paper is normally allocated approximately 12 minutes for presentation followed by 3 minutes for questions from the audience. The track chair will keep an eye on time and will alert you when time is beginning to run short by holding up cards indicating '3', '2' and '1' – these being the number of minutes that you have remaining. Please note that we actively encourage constructive questions from the audience. Your co-operation in bringing your presentation to a close within the time specified is essential to the smooth running of the conference and to be fair to other presenters.
- Presentation equipment: Presentation rooms will be equipped with a laptop and projector screen for PowerPoint presentations (Please note there will not be a transparency projector available.). Be sure to bring your presentation on a flash drive or USB drive.
- Presentation: CBER requests that PowerPoint presentations be sent in good time so that they can be uploaded onto the conference laptop. Please email these with your name and the conference that you are due to present at to: info@cberuk.com It is also a sensible precaution to make sure that you bring a copy of your presentation with you on a memory stick. Any presentation that has not been submitted in time will not be pre-loaded and remain the responsibility of the presenter.
- Handouts: should you wish to you are welcome to bring along the full text or other supporting document to handout to delegates. Please ensure that a copy is handed to the track chair of your session.
- Punctuality: Please ensure that you attend your session promptly and are aware of the order of speakers from the conference proceedings.
- Presenting in absentia: Occasionally there are some delegates who are unable to attend in person, and who wish to have their paper presented via a video clip. We would ask that these are of no more than 10 minutes in length. Most presenters upload them onto YouTube and then send across the YouTube link to the email address mentioned above. The Academy staffs are happy to collate any questions arising in response to the presentation and email them across to the author/authors.
- Conference Tracks: CBER works assiduously to organize papers to fit in with the relevant tracks. There are occasions when individual authors request that papers be moved to fit in with flights etc. Please note that whilst The Academy will do its level best to accommodate individual needs, it must be mindful of ensuring that the conference as a whole is balanced and appropriately structured.

- Authorship: Presenters have a moral obligation to acknowledge all contributions to their paper both orally at the time of presentation and by referencing authors in papers submitted to conference.
- Republishing a Presentation: Authors are free to publish their presentation elsewhere without fear of copyright problems and without permission from the CBER. However, conference papers that are selected for and published in our journals are copyrighted by the Journal of Business and Retail Management Research with the copyright given back to the author. We do this because we need to protect ourselves in case the paper has been plagiarized. Papers are only published in our journal with the consent of the author.
- Abstract-Only Publications: Authors often elect to publish only the abstract of their presentation in the conference proceedings. This effectively gives the author until the conference date to complete the paper. This also means that the author is free to submit the paper to another journal without copyright consequences. This is possible because the paper has never been published elsewhere since only the abstract was published in the proceedings. The CBER does not copyright the proceedings, which means that authors are still free to do as they see fit with the paper. Consequently, authors can claim academic credit for a conference presentation, a refereed conference proceedings publication, and possibly a journal publication from one piece of research.
- Dress Code: Lounge suits or whatever you feel most comfortable in.
