Engaging women to combat terrorism in Luwu Utara Regency (economic perspective)

Seniwati
Dwia Aries Tina Pulubuhu
Andi Alimuddin
Social and Political Sciences Faculty, Hasanuddin University, Indonesia

Keyword
Countering Terrorism, Deep Interview, Economical Sector, Good Growth Economy, Women

Abstract
This paper focuses on the role of women in countering terrorism in Luwu Utara Regency through economical sector. In combating terrorism, government needs to collaborate with civil society especially women. The aim of research is to analysis the practical tools and skills are needed to strengthen women's roles in successfully countering terrorism. This research was conducted in North Luwu Regency. This research used qualitative method namely deep interview and Focus Group Discussion (FGD). This research finds that women have a position to play in combating terrorism in their family and community. Women can play as a sympathizer, mobilizer, preventer, or perpetrator. This research highlights the economical sector as one of strategy to combat terrorism. The good growth economy will avoid people to support the terrorist organization.